

Workplace Vaccination

We understand that you take the health of your employees seriously by eliminating exposure to potential risk, however at times this is not possible. At RPS Business Healthcare we can help you by providing vaccination programmes designed to protect your exposed employees.

Why Vaccinate?

There are a number of infectious biological agents which under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health (COSHH) Regulations 2002 require you to undertake risk assessment to assess the occupational exposure risk factors. This assessment will establish if there is a need for vaccination.

The vaccination will provide the employee with effective protection from serious disease or illness which could potentially occur from exposure to an infectious organism.

How can RPS Business Healthcare help?

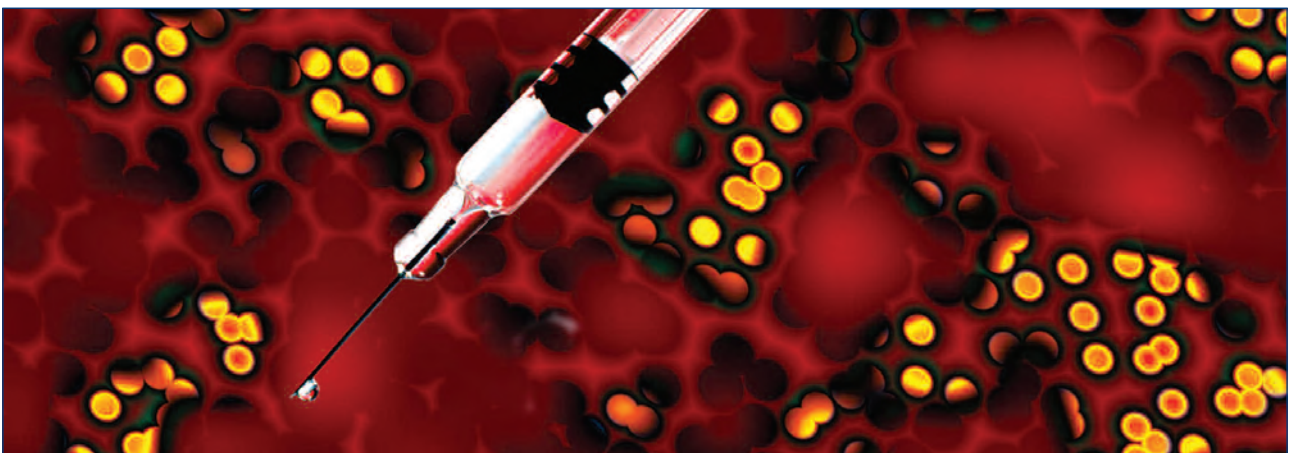

We offer a comprehensive vaccination programme available from our clinics or on-site, subject to a minimum charge. Vaccinations include:

- Hepatitis A
- Typhoid
- Hepatitis A and Typhoid (combined)
- Hepatitis B
- Varicella

This is a specialised service and our staff are therefore highly trained in setting up and delivering the service to you. The service includes:

- Convenient access either on-site or from an RPS clinic
- Help and advice in policy formulation to support the service
- Support in planning and promoting vaccination programmes
- Professional service delivery

This integrated service capability is unrivalled in today's business environment.

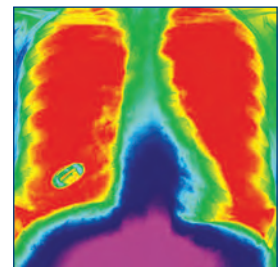

You may feel that, whilst being an attractive option, this is not something you have considered as appropriate for you.

Numerous companies have, for a number of reasons, had the same feeling upon seeing such a wide range of services available to them from one single supplier:

However, when they had taken the time to weigh up the value of such a partnership they realised it made good commercial sense.

The benefits to you include huge time and cost savings through economies of scale and reduced management and administration time as well as continuity of services and consistency of high quality service provision.
