

GROUP DIVERSITY & INCLUSION POLICY

Purpose

This document sets out RPS Group's approach and commitment to diversity and inclusion.

Why diversity and inclusion matter to RPS

Founded in 1970, RPS is a leading global professional services firm of more than 5,000 consultants and service providers. With experience across 125 countries and six continents, we define, design, and manage projects that matter to a complex, urbanising, and resource-scarce world.

In order to live our purpose of creating shared value, deliver on our promise to 'make complex easy' for our clients, and provide our staff with 'a great place to do great work,' we aim to create and support a diverse and inclusive workplace.

Our people are undeniably our greatest asset and have always been the key to our success. Without the right people in the right place being given the opportunity to do the best job they can, we will never realise our potential.

Our understanding

We recognise that first-rate human resource practices are the foundation of a successful company and naturally lend themselves to fostering a diverse and inclusive workforce. Thus, our overarching focus on creating a great place to do great work underpins our commitment to diversity and inclusion; our priority is ensuring that all of our interactions are based on respect, empathy, and fairness.

Diversity

We define diversity as a workforce comprised of a rich mix of visible and non-visible individual characteristics. This encompasses race, religion, ethnicity, colour, nationality, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, disability, marital status, parental status, military service, and socioeconomic status.

Inclusion

Inclusion is the key to ensuring our diverse workforce feels valued and empowered to contribute to our business to their full potential. True inclusion is about more than meeting quotas, breaking glass ceilings, or complying with statutory regulations. It is about creating a culture and environment that encourages and visibly values different ideas, perspectives, and styles of thinking. This must be led from the top, and all employees need to feel empowered to be part of it.

Our commitment

Mindful that a truly inclusive organization must make appropriate use of talent on a global basis and without unnecessary barriers, we are committed to embedding diversity and inclusion principles in all People processes in order to be as diverse as the communities and clients we work with, thereby securing, developing, and retaining the best available talent for the company's future.

Our approach

Our people live our purpose, deliver our promise, and demonstrate our behaviours every day. Our behaviours define who we are. Developed by our people, they underpin everything that we do. They create the memorable experiences we are known for and make RPS a great place to do great work.

‘Stronger Together’ is one of our five core behaviours and it is inherent in creating an inclusive workplace:

‘We are respectful, acknowledge diversity, and recognise the potential and contribution of everyone. We bring out the best in one another, always assuming best intent. People who learn and grow thrive in our business, sharing in our success.’

Governance and reporting

Responsibility for diversity and inclusion sits with our Group People Director, with reports on our progress delivered to the Group Leadership Team (GLT) on a quarterly basis and to the Board of Directors twice annually. Within each segment of the business, diversity and inclusion is a responsibility of the Segment CEO and People Director, who ensure that this topic is a standing item on the meeting agendas of the divisional management teams within the segment.

Review of this document

This document will be reviewed in January 2021.

John Douglas
Group Chief Executive
Date: April 1, 2020